CONSTRUCTION NEARS COMPLETION ON THE BATTERY AT ARSENAL HILL

Construction for one of Genesis Consulting Group's first engineering design projects – The Battery at Arsenal Hill residential development – is almost complete, and several of the available units have already been sold. Shortly after the firm's founding in June of 2006, Genesis Consulting Group was retained by private developer Hallmark Homes International to provide complete site design and other civil engineering services for this 2.87-acre PUD-R district urban in-fill development within downtown Columbia. The completed development consists of 44 individual lots for affordable in-town residences that include bungalow court cottages, single-family houses, carriage houses, townhomes, and two-family homes.

"We are thrilled to see one of our first projects fully realized," said James R. Morris, Jr., the president of Genesis Consulting Group. "Hallmark Homes placed their confidence in our firm early, and we are proud of our ongoing working relationship that has included close to 10 separate developments."
